Auburn Adventist Academy, a four-year co-educational boarding high school owned and operated by the Washington Conference of Seventh-day Adventists, has an enrollment of 380 students.

Students relax on center campus as Mount Rainier stands sentinel in an early autumn sky.

The retreat to Fort Flagler on Puget Sound provided seniors an opportunity for both fellowship and reflection--gathering for the group photo and watching in solitude as another day begins. --Both photos by Mr. Hyde

Step Back and ...Take a Look

This year Auburn began with a fresh new start. After a summer makeover, the school stood shining and newly updated on registration day.

Even though the new lockers and paint did improve the looks of Auburn, it was not the only thing that made this school year as good as it was.

If we stop for a minute and STEP BACK AND TAKE A LOOK, we realize that it is not the buildings that make Auburn what it is, but the students and faculty. It's the laughter, the tears, the hard work and, above all, God that made this a year to remember.

Take a look. When you see a teacher working with a student, or friends laughing at rec, or a group of students praying together, you are indeed seeing what Auburn really is.

In 1921 this administration building was constructed to replace the original ad building which had burned down in May of that year.

School life in 1930 included outdoor men's volleyball, played outside of East Hall. Now used for storage, it is the oldest building on campus.

In 1932 the Academy campus included Gibson Hall (boys' dorm), the administration building, East Hall, and Regina Hall (girls' dorm).

Auburn begins 75th year

Seventy-five years ago our school, originally called Western Washington Missionary Academy, was built on the high level ground between the White and Green Rivers. Two conference schools, one in Mt. Vernon and the other in Battle Ground, had previously been operating. Hoping to establish one strong centrally located school, the constituents raised enough money during the 1919 camp meeting to build an administration building which included classrooms, library, chapel, kitchen, dining room, and two residence halls. The school doors were opened at the end of that summer.

In 1921, shortly before graduation, a fire originating in the boiler room burned the school to the ground. The administration building was rebuilt on the same foundation, but the residence halls were relocated in separate buildings.

In 1930 the school's name was changed to Auburn Academy, which in 1971 was changed to the present name of Auburn Adventist Academy.

MOUNTAIN OUTING '93

On September 11, 1993, on an outing to Sunset Lake, students spent an enjoyable day hiking, relaxing, and reflecting on God's blessings. During church (pictured below) some faculty shared how God led them to Auburn Academy. Greg Sanborn said, "The Mountain Outing was exhilarating." Mike Ropka gave it "two thumbs up," and Stephanie Walters summed it all up with, "It was a great time to get to know new friends and bond with old ones." --D. Bettle

Northwest History Tour

At 4:30 a.m. September 12, thirty-eight students and seven adults (pictured above) embarked on a six day Pacific Northwest tour which included many historic sites, places of interest, and the highlight--the Salmon River raft trip in Idaho.

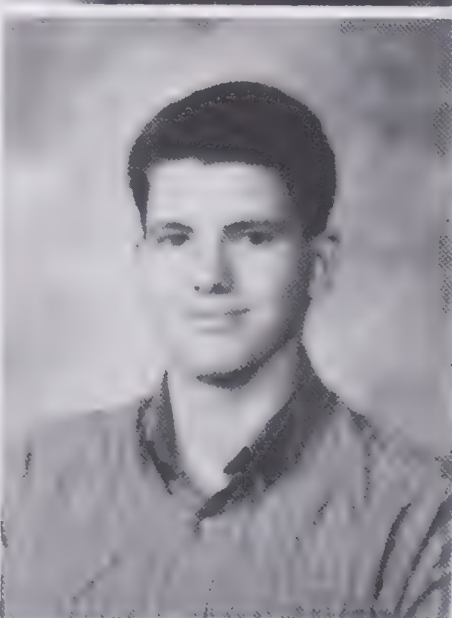

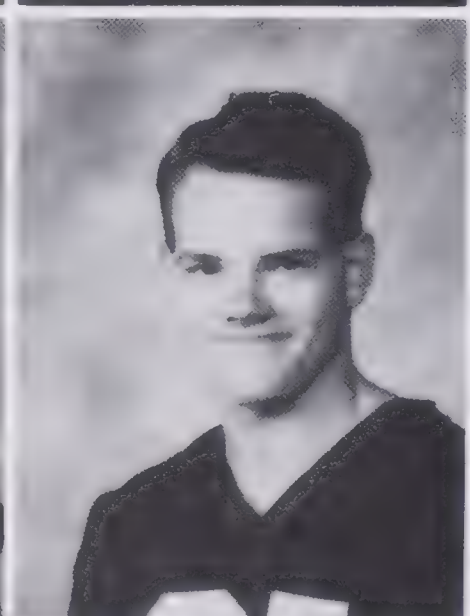

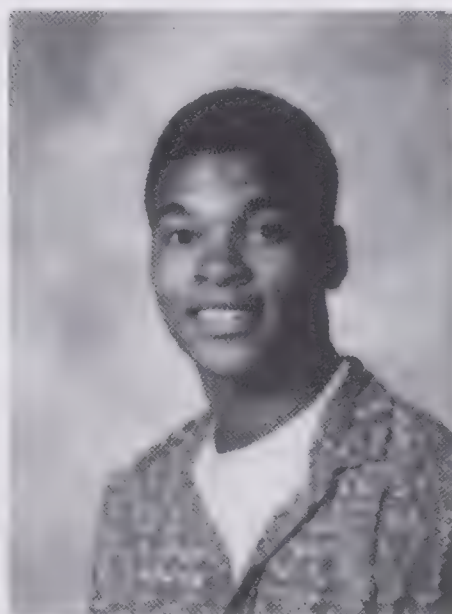

It seemed the theme of this tour was early to bed (9:30 pm), early to rise (5:30 am). "Com'on kids, we've got a lot to do tomorrow," was Mr. Miller's battle cry.

Commenting about the experience, Mikey Corpuz said, "Two thumbs up. Everybody should go." Tim Emery added, "I found it enjoyable and enlightning." Around Auburn, the History Tour is one of the highlights of the year. --Melissa Elvin

International Students

For the '93-'94 school year, we welcomed twenty eight international students to our campus. As in years past, we have students from Thailand, Korea, Japan and Germany. We also have two new students from Mongolia this year!

Under the direction of Mr. Bahnsen, the English as a Second Language program helps to prepare these students to enter the mainstream classes. Mr. Goltz and Mrs. Becraft join Mr. Bahnsen in offering ten different ESL classes, one of which is specifically designed to prepare the students to take the Test of English as a Foreign Language, a requirment for college entrance. The other classes emphasize reading, grammar and culture.

This is a great program that helps diversify and enrich the culture of all of us, and it's improving every year!

Youth Challenge

With so many worship options to attend on Tuesday evenings, it may be hard to decide which one to "patronize," but about 80-85 students from the dorms and village have opted for a new program this year called the Northwest Youth Challenge.

Pastor Cindy Tutsch, pioneer of the Youth Challenge, also helps run this program at five other academies in Washington and Oregon. The students in the Youth Challenge either give Revelation Seminars, study the Bible with interested adults in the area, or participate in children's ministries, where they share their friend Jesus with others. Greg Wendt, who helps with Revelation Seminars, says, "It's neat to meet new people that may have difficulties, and show them what you believe." Although students may not have a Bible study the first time, a little patience reaps great rewards.

Summer Brings Renewal

During the summer of 1993 Auburn Adventist Academy hosted a nationwide convention for the Maranatha Volunteers. While the volunteers were here they helped the academy attain a brand new look. The renovations included painting, carpentry work, remodeling ing faculty homes and installing new lockers. Principal D. Wayne Culmore said, "The work that Auburn Summer Renewal accomplished was a tremendous boost to the academy facilities and faculty housing."

Academics

More than just grades

How different subjects are taught can make a big difference in how you learn. At some schools, teachers are so intent on grades they forget about teaching. But the faculty at Auburn make school more than just grades. Step back and take a look, and reflect on the school year for a moment. Remember when a teacher spent a few extra minutes explaining something?

What about the times your teachers just made you feel like you were having fun? Our teachers are the reason Auburn is so special!

Mr. Willison checks Jae-Won Hwang's progress in typing class.

Freshmen P.E. students practice volleyball skills for class.

P.E., Health, and Scuba

Physical education, health, and scuba challenge students to be healthy, happy people.

P.E. classes such as basic P.E., team sports, lifesaving, and officiating encourage students to be the best they can be.

Health class, which teaches students about themselves and the environment, gives everyone the opportunity to discuss and debate health issues and to come up with individual answers.

Commented Becky Benbow, "It is an interesting class and I am learning many things that I will use later on in life."

Scuba is fun, enlightening, and often exhausting. Students, who learn the fundamentals of scuba, are then given the opportunity to take early morning dives in Puget Sound. Scuba is said to be an intense but enjoyable class.

"It was a very fun experience," says Kristin Fletcher.

Practical Arts

Jeff Staddon and Scott Gililand enthusiastically await their next project.

Undertaking an engineering project, Andy Kinney carefully measures the base of the flagpole.

Keeping his eye on the line, John Neumann makes fast work of his sewing project.

Anticipating future flights, student pilots Anna McCart and Jana Kaiser plot their maps and compensate for the wind angle. Flying the school's Cessna 172 is icing on the cake.

Mrs. Kilgore gives some sewing advice to Julie Rodman and Malea Heupel in Essential Living Skills A.

Using brute strength is no problem for Marcus Aleman, who carefully sands a piece of wood in woodshop.

Making a list and checking it twice, Megan Grogan and Torri Miller refer to the instructions.

Music Education

Christian Faber practices correct fingering on a piano in the music building.

Learning to play the clarinet takes hard work and dedication on the part of Sara Wager.

Holly Wallstrom learns what her saxophone can really do.

Under Mrs. Miller's watchful eye, Sara Murphy attempts a difficult piece of music with five flats.

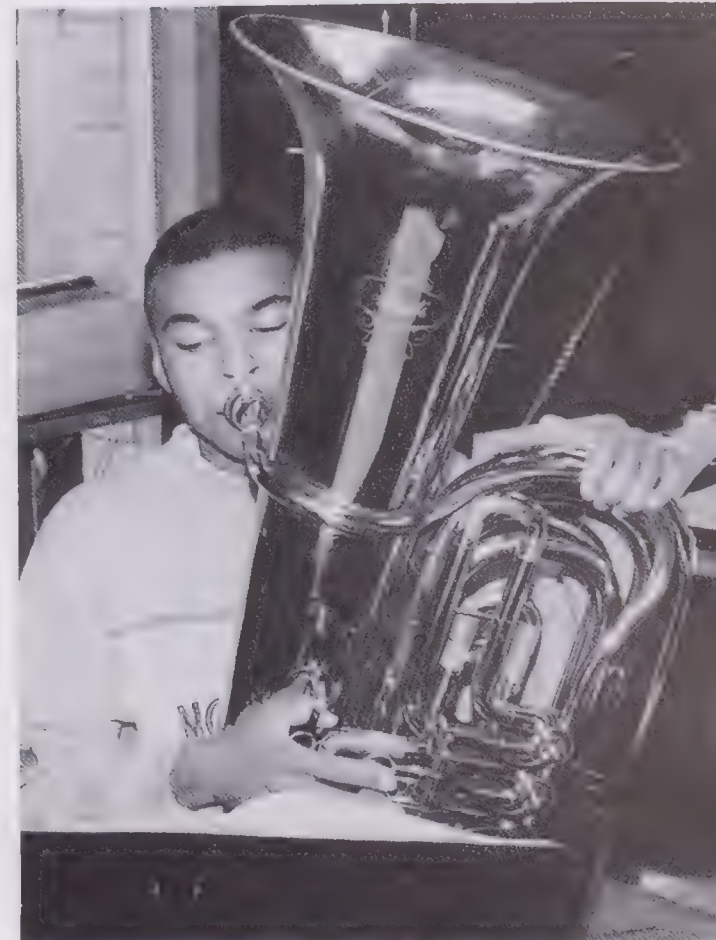

Wes Bradford, Hans Kim and Rob Farnsworth get together and practice for the Christmas Concert.

Sylvan member Vicki Clover puts in the practice it takes to really know the soprano line.

Marcus Aleman and Lindsay Littlejohn scan music for choir.

Brandon Rowe gets some helpful instruction on proper tuba playing during his lesson.

Activities

A Break From the Ordinary

Activities are the core of high school years. They keep us occupied on long wintry Saturday nights, they give us freedom from stresses that are naturally found among students of any school, and they give us something to look forward to during those dreary weeks.

But is there more to activities than just a break from the ordinary? If you step back and take a look and think about the school year, what do you remember most? Undoubtedly, it is one of the many activities! Activities are what memories are made of. Whether they are banquets,

Saturday evening activities, vespers or the fun fair, the activities on this campus have bonded us together this year!

--Taryn E. Hoffman

Being a kissing clown at the fun fair is an adventure for Chris Ball, Matt Westermeyer, Sharon Gray, Mike Ropka, Holly Knauft, Karla Schultz and Kevin McNamara.

Co-workers Alejandra Fuentes and Joseph Long spent many memorable moments working for Mr. Serrano.

Writing letters for the new bus brought a sense of accomplishment and happiness to Julie Hill, Heidi Knoefler, and Jacki Clover.

Cindy Gall sees to it that the village students get their mail.

Working in the library has proven to be lots of fun for Kristi James, here helping Amber Martin and Taryn Hoffman.

Friends Jenny Trent, Hye-mee Choi and Chris Yoshitake spend a bonding moment together during week of prayer.

Janitorial Maintenance

Alicia LaPorte helps clean up after installation of window blinds in the library.

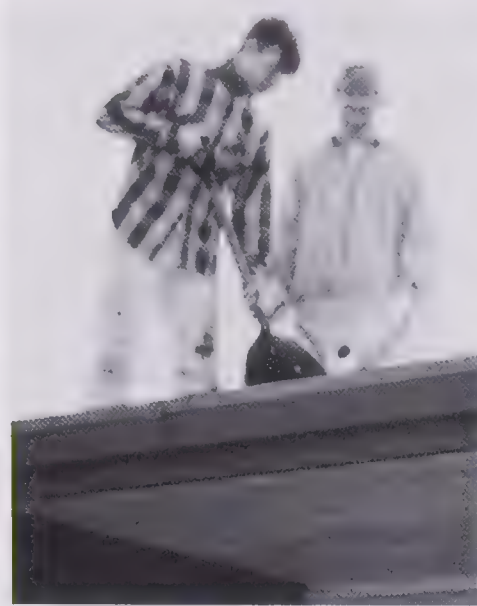

Jolene Ahlberg and Adam Wade install a bulletin board in the development building.

Keeping the windows clean is just one of the things that janitorial workers Elizabeth Shannon and Lindsey Heupel do.

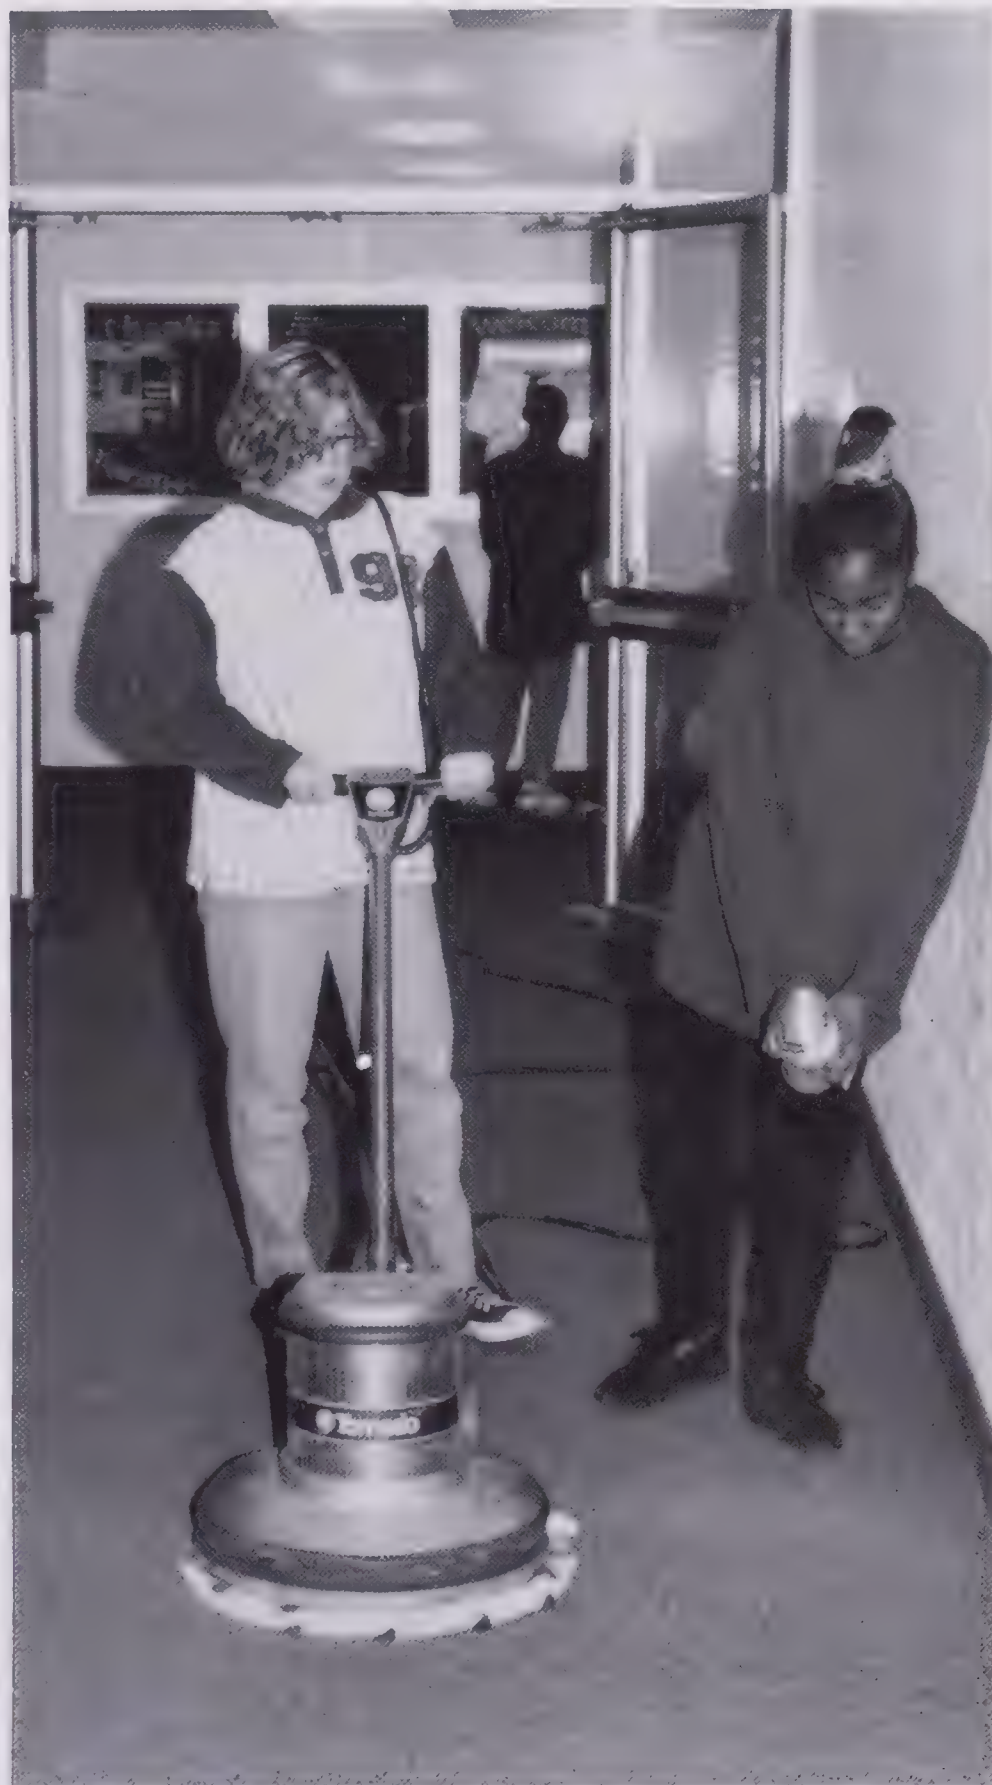

Maintenance workers Toby Smith, Nate Pierce and Chip Owens break up pallets by old East Hall.

Hank Guinn and Matt Strauch shovel away leaves and debris that accumulate on the roof of the ad building during the fall.

Grounds worker Jason Klinker speeds along on a riding lawnmower as he keeps the grass looking well-groomed.

Cathy Reamey and Carter Wolverson transport the tools of their trade back to the janitor's room.

Malea Heupel and Andrea Jackson make sure the new carpet in the ad building entrance stays looking new.

Arlen Stebbins and Michael Alumbaugh clear the walks during the pre-Thanksgiving snowfall.

Office Personnel

As Mrs. Zbaraschuck's reader, Sheri Crooker performs many duties in the English Department.

Heidi Stroud cheerfully turns to her tasks in the business office.

Walter Cox answers Kristin Lawson's questions in the music building.

Michele Schultz catches up on homework while tending the xerox machine.

Laraine McKey concentrates on covering books while working in the library.

Scott Kelly carefully measures chemicals to be used in a chemistry lab.

Music department workers Wes Bradford and Rob Farnsworth take down the sound shell after the Honor Band performance.

Taryn Hoffman puts the day's class records into the computer.

Christmas Activities

A Season to Celebrate

Once again the Christmas season arrived at Auburn Academy and the students busily planned its celebration.

The Associated Student Body officers and sponsors collectively spent 300 hours decorating and setting up for the annual Christmas banquet. This time it was a "Christmas at the North Pole," complete with Santa's workshop and a reindeer barn. President of the ASB, Jacy Nelson, was pleased with how the banquet turned out and had this to say, "I think it was the best banquet I've been to here at Auburn."

Another big event was the music department's Christmas concert. It was held at the Auburn Performing Arts Center and attended by many parents and friends. The Choir, Band, Sylvan, Wind Ensemble, String Quartet, and soloists rehearsed extra hours to make this performance one to remember. Regina Opalia said, "It was nice to see my friends on stage singing and making music." --Danelle Bettle Chris Ranftl and Priya Lowry share a romantic evening over a glass of Martinelli's sparkling cider.

Greg Wendt and Mykee Roberts wait in their performance best for the show to begin.

Santa's helpers come in all sizes as demonstrated by Mr. Kobberstad and Mr. Bahnsen.

Chad Adams and Danelle Bettel enjoy each other's company at the "North Pole."

Students enjoy the options provided at the buffet-style Christmas Banquet..

The choir joined the crowd in a lively sing-a-long at the close of the Christmas Concert.

Spiritual Enrichment

To Christ Committed

Haven't we always heard that getting "high" was bad? Well, not at Auburn Academy. Here students receive a spiritual "high" through Christ-centered programs such as Week-of-Prayer, chapel, vespers, afterglow, worship options, and outreach programs.

These programs are designed to focus students on Christ and teach them how to share His love with others.

The students of Auburn Academy endeavor to make a difference.

Andrew Nelson takes a final peek through the microscope during a Sabbath afternoon option in the biology lab.

Demonstrating a concept in Sabbath School class, Mr. Allen enthusiastically teaches the lesson.

Julie Hill, Linsey Heupel, Holli Reed, Kelly Jordan, Malea Heupel, Erika Berry, Gina Grosswiler, Julie Weiss and Torri Miller cheerfully wait for hot chocolate after caroling.

Reaching Out

Some of the numerous activities students participated in this year included the Muckleshoot Indian outreach program, Sabbath School, and Christmas caroling. The Campus Ministries department plans and organizes the options with the leadership of new campus chaplain, Pastor Thure Martinsen.

Energetic students venture weekly to the nearby Muckleshoot Indian Reservation community center to deliver supplies to the food and clothing bank and play basketball with the Indians, demonstrating Christian sportsmanship.

Many Sabbath afternoon activities allow students to gain various insights into the world God has created.

Two nights during December the students went to sing carols in local communities, at the same time gathering donations for world disaster and famine relief. Afterwards they returned to the cafeteria to enjoy hot chocolate and delicious cookies prepared by generous church members. "I really had a fun time...but my favorite part was the cookies!" quipped Jeremy Tidwell. When we step back and take a look at the past year, it will be these memories which stand out.

--Nathan Tidwell

Organizations

Getting Involved

Organizations are not only a great way to get involved but they also provide us with many important things and events. STEP BACK AND TAKE A LOOK at what the school year would have been without organizations such as ASB, CL, ZK, Rainier Vista and Rainier Echoes. Think of how dull and boring the year would have been without the banquets, or ASB activities like the mountain outing or the handshake, or how hard it would be to capture the special moods of all events without the help of the newspaper or the yearbook.

When we STEP BACK AND TAKE A LOOK

we realize how important the organizations are in our day to day life. Without them a lot of special memories would have been lost.

--Taryn E. Hoffman

Athletics

Athletics--a Way of Life

The joy of victory is something that most athletes love to feel. To touch the edge of the pool before your opponent or to make the winning shot or home run is a moment that won't soon be forgotten.

But are athletics more than the joy of victory? IF YOU STEP BACK AND TAKE A LOOK you'll see that it is not just the thrill of victory that draws people to play sports; it's the overall feeling of fitness that people seek through athletics. It's a gift that people give themselves--a healthy body and a good self-image.

It's not just the competition, it's knowing that you're taking care of your body, God's temple, and that is the greatest gift of all.

The freshman class--Four-year seniors of 1997.

The Rainier Vista Staff thanks the management of PayLess Drug Store, 1509 Auburn Way South, for supporting our yearbook with reduced cost film processing.

Sarah Chadwick and Chris Riley anticipate stepping out into the world.

Stepping Back

...Taking a Look

Through the year we have each grown in various ways. We have all gone through experiences that have shaped our lives, molding us into the person we will become.

As we move on we will always remember the days we spent at Auburn, the caring staff, the excitement of banquets and ball games, the time spent with friends, both happy and sad. But through it all WHEN WE STEP BACK AND TAKE A LOOK many years from now, the thing we will remember most is Jesus, because through it all, HE was there.
